NEWS TO KNOW
Top Local, Regional, and National Digital Inclusion & Literacy News

1. Expert consensus at conference: online access is now an essential utility [DIGITAL CHARLOTTE]
   At a national conference on digital inclusion, city government experts reached a consensus: access to online resources has evolved beyond a luxury and is now an essential part of living in the United States.

2. Digital inclusion outcomes-based evaluation [BENTON FOUNDATION]
   Published by Benton Foundation, the Digital Inclusion Outcomes-Based Evaluation report describes the challenges facing community-based organizations and other key stakeholders in using outcomes-based evaluation to measure the success of their digital inclusion programs and offers recommendations toward addressing these shared barriers.

3. How do teens with limited internet apply to college? [FAST COMPANY]
   Nowadays, students looking to go to college complete almost the entire application process online: finding schools, sending in application forms and essays, and applying for financial aid, all with the click of a mouse or tap of a screen...But between getting into college and figuring out how to pay for it, a strictly online application process can become an additional challenge for teens who have limited financial means and minimal access to the internet.

On June 15, a discussion of the impact of digital inclusion on healthcare from Livable Meck and the Charlotte-Mecklenburg Digital Inclusion Steering Team [DIGITAL CHARLOTTE]

In a 2015 survey of 1,501 U.S. consumers by consulting firm Accenture, about three-quarters of respondents noted they would use virtual services to track health indicators. But only 21 percent were actually receiving care online or using digital healthcare tools widely.

How would that percentage change if the respondents had better online access?
